for brain breaks where students would be able to access a "Pass to Class" enrichment her first proposal is $280,000 and the second is estimated at $750,000.

President Ryan said she appreciates these proposals, and noted that is about 22% of the total budget available; there is about $1.8 million dollars still unallocated beyond what was covered in the presentation. She would like to see supports around learning loss mitigation in regard to additional tutorials. She said she would like to see in the time she has been on the Board and noted that the Board continues to revise and approve budgets that the Board knows will be disapproved by the County Superior Court.

know that the state auditor and multiple other audits have said that outside of negotiated saving there are very few options. She asked the Board to recognize that some are not willing to make difficult decisions. She further said that as we bring forward a fiscal recovery plan that is not going to rest on negotiated savings, the cuts are going to be hard and will hurt the most vulnerable of the students. She agrees with Member Murawski that we should be looking at Special Education as a continued way to both meet our moral obligation but also cut expenses. She reminded that we laid off hundreds of individuals in one of the most challenging Board meetings by way of trying to meet the minimum obligations of class sizes in the collective bargaining agreements and the minimum obligations in the collective bargaining agreements. It was painful, and it allowed us to avoid going off the fiscal cliff. What we have before us is going to be equally painful if not worse if we do not do the hard

Public Comment on Reports:

Superintendent Aguilar reported that Phoebe Hearst Elementary
